AN ADDRESS

To the Freemen of Berks county, by Marks John Biddle, of Reading, in the year 1798, in which the political character of Joseph Heister, is freely spoken of, is going the rounds of the Democratic papers. Since that time Mr. Biddle has become better acquainted with Mr. Heister; and although they differ as widely as ever in politics, he has thought proper to make the following publication, as an act of justice due Mr. Heister, and to prevent improper impressions that might arise from that Address in the present contest for Governor.

From the Political Register.

PART of a letter addressed by me to the freemen of Berks county, in September, 1798, to induce them to vote for Daniel Clymer, Esq. to represent them in congress, in preference to Joseph Heister, Esq. has been published in the Democratic Press, of the 5th of this month, to show, as the Editor says, the opinion then entertained by the federal party, of the man who is now their candidate for governor.

It is not easy to perceive what the federal party have to do with a letter addressed by me to the freemen of Berks county, or how it can interest the public to know what I thought of Mr. Heister nineteen years ago, or at any other time. I never was intimate with Mr. Heister, and certainly till some years after the year 1798, had no opportunity, from personal communication, to form a correct judgment of his ability or merit, even had I been capable. From the time I became of age until this day, I have differed in opinion on political subjects with Mr. Heister, and before the year 1798, we had frequently interested ourselves warmly on different sides at elections; his influence had several times prevented the election of my friends, and I had been instrumental in preventing his being elected a member of congress in 1796. In 1798 Mr. Heister was taken up by the democratic party as their candidate, he was the eminent man and acknowledged leader of the party in Berks and the adjoining counties; indeed he was generally looked up to by the democrats throughout the state--they did not then pretend that he wanted sagacity or firmness, neither had they discovered the anti-republican tendency of his vote in convention. The fact was well known, but they then thought as men of candor and judgment now think, that the vote did not implicate his character either as a republican, a man of sense, or a friend to the freedom of election. Daniel Clymer, Esq. was the federal candidate. Every person who considers the irritation and prejudice which would naturally result from the constant opposition of Mr. Heister and myself, and the occasional success of each, and recollects the violent party spirit so general in 1798, and that I wrote to promote the election of my personal as well as political friend, against a man who I considered my personal as well as political enemy, and the very slight acquaintance I had with Mr. Heister, must perceive that every opinion of mine at the time, as to his merit or ability, is not entitled to consideration. It was certainly unbecoming in me to hazard an opinion, but I hope it will be recollected that my letter was intended exclusively for the citizens of Berks county, who, from their knowledge of Mr. Heister, could correct my errors. I am afraid I will be accused of acting impertinently in giving the sentiments I now entertain of Mr. Heister, but I am forced to it by the observation published by Mr. Binns, with my letter. He said I consider Mr. Heister as a fool, a miser and a liar. I never did think or say that Mr. Heister was a fool. From the circumstances stated, I certainly did underrate Mr. Heister's talents, but I thank God I have got over my prejudice; and although I am not now intimate with Mr. Heister, I know him much better than I did some years ago, and from the intercourse I have had with him, and from the information of gentlemen on whose judgment I can rely, who are well acquainted with him, I believe him to be a man of good sense; that he has had great experience in public life, and as a man of business, is well known. I do know that Mr. Heister is a good husband, father, neighbor and citizen—As to the charge of Mr. Heister's being a miser, it is too ridiculous to notice—I never thought or said he was a miser—I never could have thought Mr. Heister was a liar. It is true, I have stated in answer to one of his questions, that I had convicted him of two falsehoods, but it is also true, that in another part of the letter, I stated the premises from which I drew my conclusion, which is as follows: Mr. Heister had stated in his address, that he had voted against the law which forbids free speaking and writing, and that we had an envoy in France, and therefore might expect peace. I contended that the Sedition Law did not prevent free speaking & writing, and that Mr. Gerry, who was then in France, was not an envoy, as he had not been received as such, and therefore according to my logic, at that time Mr. Heister had told two lies; any candid person must perceive that the inference is absurd; this is sufficient to prove the prejudice which operated on me when I wrote my letter. I believe Mr. Heister to be a man of veracity. It is said, that it appears by my letter that Mr. Heister is an owner of slaves & an imprisoner of debtors. Mr. Heister did, in 1798, own one or two slaves, but he was a kind master and emancipated them many years ago, when they were young and healthy. He may possibly have imprisoned some person for debt (I do not know the fact,) but he has not imprisoned any person for many years, to my knowledge, and is an indulgent creditor--his name is seldom on the docket, and I do not recollect a single cause tried in Berks county, since I have been in practice, (near 30 years) to which he was a party, and I believe no execution has been issued at his instance for many years. I did believe Mr. Heister had made but one campaign during the war which established our independence; from what I have since heard, I have no doubt I was mistaken, I cannot at present perceive the force of my remark, that Mr. Heister had not pretended that he had served his country in congress; he had if my recollection serves me been but one session in Congress—he acted with the opposition; he, no doubt, thought the opposition was right, and of course, that he was right, and had served his country, I thought differently but certainly it is a matter of no consequence now what he or I thought on the subject.

The editor says that Mr. Heister is the federal candidate, and that I am his friend and political partizan. It is well known Mr. Heister is not the federal candidate, neither am I his political partizan. I have not had any communication with Mr. Heister, relative to the election. I have not attended any meeting or committee for the purpose of promoting his election, or taken any part which would authorise a man of honor or common decency, to introduce my name in the present contest for Governor. My politics are the same as they have been, and I have no reason to suppose Mr. Heister's are changed; but I hope and believe we have both got over our prejudices. I certainly am very desirous that Mr. Heister may be elected governor of the state, but not from personal motives, as it respects Mr. Heister or myself. Mr. Heister and I have been friends for many years, and I hope will continue so during life, however we may differ on political subjects.

The men residing in this place, who furnished Mr. Binns with the Reading paper and observations, acted dishonorably. They knew that Mr. Heister and myself have been on friendly terms for some years; that our families visit, and that his grand daughters were intimate with my daughters. Not one of my children know that Mr. Heister and I had ever been at variance—probably many of his children were equally ignorant, and all that had passed had been forgiven and probably forgotten by those old enough to remember the circumstances. The person who sent the paper also knew that Mr. Heister is not an owner of slaves or an imprisoner of debtors. Such base and cowardly incendiaries merit the contempt and indignation of all good citizens. I hope the public will excuse this trespass on their time. I shall not commit a similar offence.

MARKS JOHN BIDDLE.

Reading Sept. 9, 1817.

[From the London Monthly Visitor.]

A FACT,

Relating to the Marquis de Bouille.

Some years previous to the late revolution in France, when the nobility yet had their almost regal honors, a Mr.——, a young Englishman of fortune, who was on his travels, and stopped in Paris, used to spend much of his time at the hotel of the Marquis de Bouille. His hospitality and personal accomplishments won far on the esteem of Mr.——; and in one French family, even in the heart of the most dissolute court in Europe, he beheld connubial happiness, connubial purity! The personal graces of the marchioness, though in the wane of forty years, yet gave loveliness to the sentiments of a mind that was only to be known to be adored. She was admired and esteemed by Mr.——, as her husband was revered and loved. When this truly noble pair quitted Paris, for the country, they requested their guest speedily to follow them. Mr.—— had been some weeks in Paris after the departure of his illustrious friends, and was preparing to comply with their wishes, when he received a letter from the Marquis, written with the utmost consternation and anguish of mind. He had lost the wife of his bosom—she was then lying dead in the castle, after having endured a short but rapid illness—"she was at peace; hut for him, his grief must be eternal as his love."

This intelligence surprised and afflicted Mr.——, and eager to console his suffering friend, he immediately set off for the chateau. When he arrived at the village which lay at the foot of the hill on which the castle was situated, instead of the stillness of sympathetic sorrow marking every countenance for the loss of one whose inmost soul was charity—instead of this decent tribute to the virtuous dead—the bells rang; and the peasants were assembled, dancing, singing and exhibiting every feature of festivity. Amazed and shocked, he enquired what it meant? The general reply was—"The marchioness is come to life!" Bewildered with hope he hardly cherished, he hastened to the chateau, and there was received with opened arms by the happy marquis. He led him to the chamber of his amiable wife, who thanked Mr.——with tears of gratitude, for the consolation his friendship had intended her Lord. After the first hurried observations were over, Mr.——felt his emotions subside to tranquility; he enquired the reason of this blissful change. The marchioness replied to him nearly in these terms:

"My illness was sudden and alarming, and the Marquis summoned several physicians to attend me. All their exertions seemed to fail, and they declared that there was no hope--but consented to remain in the room till I breathed my last. I took leave of my family. And in bidding my husband adieu forever, a sudden convulsion seized me—and I appeared to expire in his arms. I fell back on my bed pale and motionless; and he was torn by absolute force from the apartment. The physicians advanced, and looked at me, declared that I was dead. I was stiff, and cold as marble, and laid in my shroud upon my couch to be ready for interment. For this part of my narration I am indebted to my women. In obedience to our religion, and in honor of my rank, the room was darkened, hung with black, and lighted up with wax lights: and the anthems for the dead were chaunted morning and evening around my bed. At last the day came in which I was to be committed to the earth. My husband, who had been detained from the sight of my corpse, hearing that I was to be removed, broke from his room and flying to the door of my apartment, insisted upon seeing me once more. In vain he intreated: his attendants, in obedience to the physicians held him fast—but his grief was stronger than their strength: and with a sudden exertion he burst from their hold, and rushed into my chamber, flung himself upon my bosom, exclaiming—"My wife! wife! my dear wife, they shall not tear thee from me!" At these words I raised myself and clasped him in my arms: he fainted.

By the assistance of the faculty he was soon recovered; and I removed to a warm bed, which quickly restored me to my former self. What I have told you is extraordinary; but what I have yet to tell, yet strikes me with terror.——When I appeared to expire, I suppose I swooned; for I have no recollection of any thing, till my senses seemed to awake at the strains of fine music. I found myself stretched on my couch, unable to open my eyes, to move, or articulate a sound. The voices of the choiristers chilled, me with dread; but when I heard them proceed for hours in the solemnity, and my women, who set around me, discoursing of my death and intended burial—God knows what were my horrors! the conviction that I should be buried alive, with all my senses contemplating the scene, almost drove me mad; yet I was incapable of expressing, even by a sign that I existed. In this state of distraction and terror was my mind, when I heard my husband's voice at my door—when I heard his struggles—his eloquent grief. Oh! how my soul was torn with agony!—It appeared ready to burst my body:--but when my dear Lord threw himself upon my breast, and in all the torture of anguish called upon my name, and strained me to his heart---it caused such a tempest in my soul—such a revulsion in my whole frame--that I felt the will, and the next moment had the power, to grasp him in my arms---the rest you already know."

This relation is a fact. Mr.—— is now in London. I am not certain of the present residence of the Marquis; but his late work on the French revolution will give him celebrity wherever he goes.

In many papers it is spelled Heister, which is not the manner in which he writes his name.

YELLOW FEVER.

It has been ascertained from tables and records for the last 24 years, that in Philadelphia the Yellow Fever does not prevail, when the mean heat of June and July does not exceed 70 deg.; but that in EVERY SUMMER since 1793, whenever the average heat of those months has exceeded 79 then the Fever has raged, and been most mortal in those years in which the thermometer has indicated the greatest altitude.

We give the following extract (says the Baltimore Federal Gazette,) without any comment. Perhaps the editors of the National Intelligencer may furnish some further information, if there is any, relating to this strange treatment of our minister, which may be disclosed at this time.

Extract from Washington.

It is rumored here, and I think on good authority, that Mr. Gallatin, our minister at the Court of Versailles, has lately transmitted to our government despatches in which he states, "that he has for some time past been treated with such marked neglect by the ministers of the most Christian king, and all his attempts to confer, or correspond with them on subjects of importance to the United States, have been so constantly evaded, that he thinks his further stay wholly useless." It is hinted, but for this I do not vouch, that the conduct of the French Government is the result of dissatisfaction caused by a toast given by a postmaster in the United States at some public dinner, of which an account was transmitted by the French minister here to that Government.

SHAVING AT SEA.

In a Kingston, Jamaica paper, of August 20, we find the case of Michael M'Dermott vs. Joseph Hinds. The action was brought to recover compensation in damages against the defendant, who was captain of the merchant ship Dublin, of Dublin, in which vessel the plaintiff was a passenger. On crossing the line the usual ceremony of Neptune's coming on board, shaving, ducking, &c. were adopted by the sailors, when the plaintiff was taken from his cabin, although he was unwell, and severely ducked, in the presence of the defendant, who did not interfere. The fact having been proved, his honor the chief judge charged the jury, and gave it as the opinion of the bench, that it was the bounden duty of the captain of a ship to protect his passengers, and prevent their receiving any insult while on board his vessel. The jury retired for a short time, and returned a verdict for the plaintiff---damages 250 pounds sterling with costs.

Francis Mezarra, on Saturday, was sentenced for a libel, in carricaturing or disfiguring an intended portrait of a gentleman, for whom it was painted, and who refused to pay for it from its want of resemblance found guilty at a preceding term. Being a foreigner not in affluent circumstances, and induced to take the step by the frequency of the practice in his native country, and his ignorance of the laws and language of ours, he was fined in the mitigated penalty of One Hundred Dollars.---E. Post.

CALCUTTA PAPERS,

To the 17th of May, have been received at Salem. They give numerous details of the events in India. The strong fortress of Hatrass, had been captured by the British army; and the capture had been followed by the complete surrender of the Rungust Singh, one of the most formidable of the native kings. In all the actions with the "rebels," in the interior between Calcutta and Madras, the British detachments are stated to have been victorious, and the speedy close of the war was anticipated. It appears that India had not been exempt from destructive inundations and tempests nor the sea rid of pirates.

NEW-YORK, Sept, 13.

The trial before the circuit court of the U. States, of capt. JACOBSON, for an attempt to defraud the underwriters by sinking the ship Aristides, was brought to a close yesterday morning, the court having been engaged through the night in a patient investigation of the facts in the case. At four o'clock the jury brought in a verdict GUILTY.

Sept. 15.

Sentence of death was pronounced upon Captain JACOBSON, at three o'clock on Saturday afternoon, by his honour judge Livingston. The prisoner heard it with firmness, and was apparently unmoved. He observed to the court that he had three requests to make, viz. that his person might not be confined in irons, that he might be executed in the dress he then wore, and that his body might not be given for dissection.

UNKNOWN SECT.

Newton, Sussex county, N. J. Sep. 15.

Passed through this town on Wednesday last, ten pilgrims (six men and four women) from Woodstock in the state of Vermont, on their way to the southward, possessed of a very singular appearance and deportment.

They profess to be the only true followers of Jesus Christ, and his Gospel, and are in a special manner called of God to go forth into the world to do, and that continually, his will; for which purpose, they have forsaken their houses, lands, relatives and friends, and all this world's enjoyments, and after the manner of the Apostles, are travelling from place to place, doing good to the children of men.

They have a prophet or leader among them, who occasionally preaches, and most of them exhort, in the streets and ways as they pass by.

They seem all devotion and humility, & are continually engaged in the service of Christ; holding forth the power of his Holy Spirit, as communicated unto them, saying that the Millennium is near at hand, & that the lost tribes of Judah, are now beginning to be gathered in, and the way is fast opening when the four quarters of the world will be gathered into one fold of such as will receive the true spirit of faith; not the faith which is received by christians of the present day, but such as is accompanied with holy fire. They have no abiding place in view, but travel as the Lord may direct. They say the people of the world are of the Devil, for they cannot serve the Lord and be Christ's. They ask no charity; move very slow, with a cart, yoke of oxen and one horse, and say the Lord will provide for them, for where they go, there is he. Their dress is very singular, long beards, close caps, and bear skins tied around them.

From the Savannah Republican.

We have received the following intelligence from the South.—General M'Gregor resigned on the 4th instant, after receiving the resignations of most of the persons originally on the expedition. The command is now in colonel Irvine from New-York, and they profess a determination, to fight governor Coppinger, who is assembling a large force in the vicinity. His chief power will be our countrymen, who are flocking to him from both sides of the river St, Mary's. Report gives him 800. —It is impossible—at all events the present force will fail. They have neither talents nor resources nor popularity—for most men will always be against a privateering nest---into which this is to be converted.

The Morgiana with sheriff H——l arrived a few days ago—she has like the Argo, been the promised golden fleece. She has nothing for MacGregor—no money, men or train of cannon to batter—in short no munitions of war for him—nor is she herself, as was intended, a public vessel—a mere privateer, not even hoisting the flag of the republic. General MacGregor resigned to colonel Irvine who was duly elected chief of the military republic. There are many causes of failure—discordant materials and private discontent improperly had against MacGregor, who had been stinted of resources and grossly deceived; and thus his conduct has been discolored. The New-York expidition are all backed out or turned privateersmen—they have sent him nothing and caballed abroad and with him to remove him—they have succeeded—and all of reflection have left the place with Sir Gregor. He has had one or two conspiracies to surprize the fort, and deliver it to the enemy. The general and his wife left Amelia on the 5th instant.

Interesting Anecdote.—Serjeant Weir, of the Scotch Grays, was pay serjeant of his troop at the battle of Waterloo, and, as such, might have been excused serving in action, and perhaps he should not have been forward; but, on such a day as the battle of Waterloo, he requested to be allowed to charge with the regiment. In one of the charges he fell, mortally wounded, and was left on the field. Corporal Scott, of the same regiment, who lost a leg, asserts, that when the field was searched for the wounded and slain, the body of Serjeant Weir was found with his name written on his forehead by his own finger dipped in his own blood. This his comrade said, he was supposed to have done that his body might be found and known, and that it might not be imagined he had disappeared with the money of the troop.

The Patentee has the confidence that when its advantages are known, by experience, it will claim the attention and use of the whole of the United States.
